Down to the River to Pray

As I went down in the river to pray
Studying about that good ol' way
And who shall wear the starry crown
Good Lord, show me the way

O sisters, let's go down
Let's go down, come on down
O sisters, let's go down
Down in the river to pray

As I went down in the river to pray
Studying about that good ol' way
And who shall wear the robe and crown
Good Lord, show me the way

O brothers, let's go down
Let's go down, come on down
Come on, brothers, let's go down
Down in the river to pray

As I went down in the river to pray
Studying about that good ol' way
And who shall wear the starry crown
Good Lord, show me the way

O fathers, let's go down
Let's go down, come on down
O fathers, let's go down
Down in the river to pray

As I went down in the river to pray
Studying about that good ol' way
And who shall wear the robe and crown
Good Lord, show me the way

O mothers, let's go down
Come on down,
Don't you wanna go down?
Come on, mothers, let's go down
Down in the river to pray

As I went down in the river to pray
Studying about that good ol' way
And who shall wear the starry crown
Good Lord, show me the way

O sinners, let's go down
Let's go down, come on down
O sinners, let's go down
Down in the river to pray

As I went down in the river to pray
Studying about that good ol' way
And who shall wear the robe and crown
Good Lord, show me the way

Dear Judith;

What does it mean to have a lifelong friend? I've thought about this in the past months as I have reflected on my lifelong friendship with you Judith. I believe it is a gift and one that can so easily be taken for granted, because the friend is always "just there" and always has been.

Through childhood, memories include playing at each other's houses, picking raspberries in our garden, picking peas in your garden, Sunday afternoon bike rides that went well beyond the boundaries set out by our parents, cottaging at Chesley Lake, skating after school until dark on our school rink and the many childhood antics that accompany elementary school years. Interestingly, our personalities were not really that similar. Maybe that's why we just "connected". Also, you didn't have a sister, and though I had two, one was over three years older and one was over four years younger.

Although I have been reflecting on our many experiences through the years, remembering periods of time when we had little interaction, to other periods, when our lives, both personally and with family were closely connected, I guess what I'm really thinking about is why we stayed connected, rather than retelling our history.

In some ways, our lifelong connection is puzzling, because we are different in many ways. We were certainly never two peas in a pod, though your mother referred to us as "you doneys", whatever that meant. Though you are over a year younger than me, it always seemed that you could do everything better, and that was something I felt all of my life. I don't recall ever feeling jealous, just admiring the many strengths you demonstrated. You were always true to what you believed at the moment and were never afraid to share your beliefs with anyone. That is what has gained you so much respect by so many people, not just me, a lifelong friend. Your feminism, political activism, theological beliefs.... never hidden from anyone. I have always admired your courage and steadfastness or just plain stubbornness on some issues.

What I have been fortunate to experience is that no matter what topic, issue or situation arises, we can always talk candidly; be it church-related, other friends, family members, whatever. A deep trust and unwritten bond exists, which is probably what I most treasure. These past few years as your health has been challenging it seemed even more important to connect with you on a regular basis. This of course was through regular phone calls, though we did manage to get together when Covid permitted. As always, we could just pick up from where we had left off! That is not something to take for granted but something to be valued and I do! I can't imagine not having you in my life. There would be a great void which could not be replaced.

I am deeply saddened to think of you suffering in your present state and pray for the best kind of healing for you! Deep down I feel that you have a strong will to live with whatever quality of life that may be. Your love of family is so great that you still have much to offer them. I pray for comfort, healing and peace for you. Know how much I value our friendship and look forward to seeing you again!

In love and friendship,

Sandra Schiedel
